I would be careful with this one . You appear to be taking the right approach.

As I think about this, I can check with Chrissy even though she has retired. If we wanted to invite a reporter we could ask the communications task force to do so and I could meet with PR people from the organizations who participate in the Pain Care Forum.

I am not aware of a meeting with Chrissy Kopple and Tim Martin. If it took place it would've been with the communications task force. I think we better discuss this. But I see no reason that you have to invite the media to a meeting of organizations anymore than you would have to invite them to any other coalition meeting. To my knowledge we have never said it's an open forum only that it's open to any organization that has a legitimate interest and the issues for which the Pain Care Forum was established.

Burt, is there some other forum in which he participated? I specifically recall Chrissy Kopple having a meeting with him and PCF members, as part of the PCF. She even drafted a report, I believe. This was shortly after I arrived.

Either way, we should consider this and discuss it. Preventing media from a meeting we describe as open to all is problematic.

No. We have not invited media.

We have always restricted media from coming to the Pain Care Forum as the meetings are completely off the record. That has been the case even though we obviously send an email out to 150 people. Is he asking?

What would your reaction be if we invited Brett from Politico to a Pain Care Forum meeting? Strict ground rules, background only, etc.
